

THE FABULOUS FIFTIES

Relive the Fabulous Fifties at the Nambour Museum, 18 Mitchell Street, Nambour

Saturday, 13 April from 10am-4pm

Nambour Museum volunteer Daphne Heaton remembers how pretty it was to wear a rope petticoat when she was growing up in the 1950s.

One of the special displays will be an original 50s rope petticoat owned by museum volunteer Daphne Heaton. She wore the petticoat as a teenager when she was growing up in Nambour during the 50s. Also on display will be well-cared for 1950s cars and many topical items to inspect.

“A 50s girl would not feel satisfactorily dressed without her rope petticoat,” Daphne said. “We wore big full skirts, accentuated by tiny waists with belts. Fashion was about pretty clothes then, with lovely colours, and it was very feminine.”

Daphne said Nambour was a great place in the 50s with plenty of jobs for everyone and plenty to do. So visit the museum to check out what sports were played, the entertainment, the shops, the music, photos and the news of the era.

Admission is $4 adults, $1 school children

With stall, refreshments and a raffle available.
